OFN and Mrs South Africa Semi-Finalist inspire Mphethi Mahlatsi learners

Valentine uses soul music to heal the community

Orange Farm entrepreneur, Valentine Lekopotsa, is using soul music to bring healing, relaxation and unity to the community through his movement called Lavida Valentino.

Lekopotsa, who was raised in Orange Farm Ext 9 Phase 1, said he was inspired to start the initiative locally after hosting similar experiences in other areas. "I felt pain asking myself why I was not doing this for my own community where I was raised," he said. He described Lavida Valentino as more than entertainment, saying it is a spiritual soul session focused on rare music not commonly heard on radio stations or streaming platforms. According to Lekopotsa, the aim is to give people a memorable musical experience while helping them heal emotionally and relax after stressful days. With over 20 years of musical experience, he hopes to use music to unite people and create a peaceful atmosphere in the community. Lekopotsa also wants to support local talent and is currently looking for a drummer to join the selected musicians for upcoming performances. "This is a lifetime gift I want to give to the people through music," he added.

Excitement and eagerness to engage with the OFN team and the beautiful Mrs Aobakwe Sebokoane were captured in these scenes. Shout out to Principal Mxolisi Mamkeli and those matriculants in attendance

Grade 12 learners at Mphethi Mahlatsi Secondary in Ext 8b received motivation and a listening session during a special visit by Orange Farm News, joined by Mrs South Africa semi-finalist, Aobakwe Sebokoane. This visit formed part of a Community Content Lab - in partnership with the Digital News Transformation Fund (DNTF). During this session, learners shared what they would like to see in their local newspaper and how they prefer to consume news. Sebokoane, a mother of two and director of Kamano Logistics, joined the Orange Farm News team for a motivational session. Sharing her journey, she encouraged learners to believe in themselves and work hard despite challenges. "I started ballet dancing at the age of six. My mom got retrenched, so I had to stop because she could no longer afford my classes, but my ballet teacher did not want me to drop out. Due to hard work, I was then offered a bursary to become a professional ballet dancer, and I travelled around Africa. I struggled to fit in because I always felt different until I realised that uniqueness is actually my strength. Confidence is not something you wake up with, you build it," she said. OFN Editor-in-Chief, Shirley Govender, said engaging with young readers helps the newspaper co-create content that connects with the youth and reflects their realities and aspirations. OFN would like our readers to like, share and vote for Mrs South Africa 2026 semi-finalist, Aobakwe Sebokoane. To vote SMS her name and surname to 47587, R3 per SMS.

Pule Earm guns for Ward 4

This Ward 4 councillor candidate promises improved service delivery, youth empowerment and development

Community activist and aspiring leader, Pule Motloung, has announced his intention to become the next Ward 4 councillor, promising leadership focused on accountability, service delivery and youth empowerment. Motloung said his decision to run is driven by a desire to bring meaningful change to the community. "I believe I can bring the better change that the community has been longing for," he said. He identified poor infrastructure, including roads, water and electricity challenges, as some of the major issues facing Ward 4. Motloung also stressed the importance of good governance and fair access to opportunities for residents. According to Motloung, unemployment and crime can be addressed through collective effort and stronger youth involvement. He plans to host a Youth Economic Indaba within his first 100 days in office to create a database of young people and connect them with opportunities. Motloung also intends to establish a functional working committee involving ward structures and civil society to improve service delivery monitoring. He said his passion for serving the community sets him apart from previous councillors, adding that his focus is on making a real difference in residents' lives.

Regenesys Wellness Hub set to transform healthcare access in Drieziek

Community members and stakeholders gather during the unveiling of the facility, designed to bring people closer to improved wellbeing

Amsai Primary School in Drieziek 1 was the venue for the launch of the Ananda Jayanti Health and Wellness Hub, an initiative aimed at improving healthcare access and promoting healthier lifestyles within the community.

The event brought together local organisations, healthcare workers and community leaders for a day focused on wellness, support and education. During the launch, residents received free blood pressure, weight and height screenings, while organisations shared information about preventative healthcare and healthy living.

The event created a lively atmosphere as community members engaged with different service providers and learnt more about the healthcare support available to them.

Simphiwe Ntuli, Wellness consultant at Abby Health, said the screenings were designed to make healthcare services more accessible and convenient for residents.

"It takes about three minutes and you are done," Ntuli added.

She added that residents receive their screening results through WhatsApp, email or SMS after completing the process.

Regenesys Business School head, Dr Marko Saravanja, told OFN that the initiative forms part of wider efforts to revive projects that previously supported the community.

"Last year, I got involved again with organisations and individuals to repair the school and renew not only the school, but also the health centre and other projects that were successful in the past," said Savaranja.

He further explained that previous community initiatives included clinics, educational programmes, crèches and pregnancy support projects aimed at uplifting residents. Ward 4's Cllr Simon Molefe, emphasised that the wellness hub would help address challenges faced by residents who struggle to access nearby healthcare services. "People are finding it difficult to access medical services. Now elderly people will not have to walk very far to get medication," Cllr Molefe added.

Molefe also said the partnership with Regenesys Business School is expected to create opportunities for local matriculants through bursaries, learnerships and future development projects linked to a planned computer centre. Full clinic operations are expected to begin on 1 June.

Organisations including PinkDrive, loveLife, Indoda Wednesday and Basic Support Package (BSP) also took part in the launch, providing support services and information to residents throughout the day.

Voices of unity shine during Walk with Pride march

Participants march together carrying messages of awareness, support and inclusion during the community awareness walk

Songs, colourful placards and messages of support filled the streets as members of the LGBTQIA+ community, local residents and healthcare workers gathered for the "Walk With Pride" March and Dialogue hosted by Clean Touch.

The march created a vibrant atmosphere focused on inclusion, dignity and access to healthcare services. The event started at the Y Centre stop sign and ended at the Clean Touch premises, where participants took part in health awareness activities and dialogue sessions. Community members were offered free services including HIV testing and counselling, health services, PrEP initiation, STI screening, as well as lubricant and condom distribution.

Organisers said the initiative aimed to create a safe and welcoming environment while encouraging people to prioritise their health and wellbeing. Throughout the event, participants shared messages promoting acceptance, equality and the importance of standing together against stigma and discrimination.

Clean Touch representative Xolisile Nxumalo described the march as an important platform for education, support and unity within the community.

"The Walk With Pride march was about creating awareness, promoting acceptance and ensuring that people have access to vital health services without fear of discrimination. We are happy with the support shown by the community," said Nxumalo. Participants also engaged in discussions about challenges faced by the LGBTQIA+ community and the importance of improving access to healthcare services. Organisers thanked everyone who attended and supported the initiative, expressing hope to host more community empowerment events in the future.

SAPS and forensic vehicles at the site where a woman lost her life after trench collapses during excavation work this month

A trench collapse at a construction site in Orange Farm Ext 8a, claimed the life of a woman on 12 May. Orange Farm SAPS Corporate Communication Sergeant Shaan Motsapi told OFN: "Police responded to the scene at about 12:15, where they found the worker's body. She was wearing personal protective equipment at the time of the incident."

According to police, workers were busy performing their duties while an excavator was digging a trench when soil caved in and buried the victim. "The woman sustained head injuries and was declared dead at the scene," Sgt Motsapi added. Orange Farm SAPS confirmed that an inquest docket has been opened for further investigation.

Concerns over illegal dumping and unsafe surroundings pushed residents of Orange Farm Ext 2, to launch a community clean-up campaign around Vulcanindlela Secondary on 15 May. Armed with refuse bags, rakes, and cleaning tools, residents cleared litter, cut overgrown grass, and removed waste from areas surrounding the school in an effort to create a cleaner and safer environment for learners. Community members said neglected spaces and growing levels of dirt near the school had become a concern, especially for the safety and wellbeing of pupils. "This is about protecting our children and showing them that their environment matters," resident Khonzaphi Mbele told OFN. Parents, volunteers and residents worked together throughout the day, with many calling for ongoing community-led programmes to help maintain cleanliness and discourage illegal dumping in the area. The initiative also highlighted the role communities can play in addressing local challenges through collective action and shared responsibility. OFN's Facebook was lit with praises around this initiative.

Police tape marks the scene where the community caught the suspect

A deadly confrontation has left the Lakeside 19-year-old dead, with police arresting a suspect shortly after. According to Orange Farm SAPS, police were called to the scene at about midday on 19 May, where they found the body of the teenager lying in the street with a stab wound to the neck. Police said the deceased and the suspect allegedly had a previous conflict which led to another confrontation on the day of the incident.

The teenager succumbed to his injuries on the scene. Community members assisted police by apprehending the suspect shortly after the incident and handing him over to authorities. During investigations, police also recovered the alleged murder weapon at the suspect's hiding place. Orange Farm SAPS Corporate Communication Officer, Sgt Shaan Motsapi, confirmed that the suspect was detained at Orange Farms SAPS.

Following a verbal altercation, the suspect reportedly went home, returned to the scene armed with a knife (oukapie) and attacked the victim during a fight.

At time of going to press, details of the suspect's court appearances were not available.

Castrow Musiq sets the tone new amapiano song

An emerging amapiano vocalist and songwriter from Ext 8b is working to make his mark in the music industry with a new release that is steadily gaining attention online.

Known widely as Castrow Musiq, the Orange Farm-based artist recently shared his latest track with industry stakeholders in hopes of expanding his reach and securing new opportunities within the amapiano scene. According to the artist, the song has already started attracting traction across streaming platforms and social media. Castrow Musiq said his passion for music continues to drive him to create a sound that connects with listeners while representing the vibrant talent coming from Orange Farm. "As an amapiano vocalist and songwriter, I want to grow my brand and share my music with a bigger audience," he said. The artist has also been using social media platforms such as TikTok to promote his music and engage with supporters. Through his account, Official Castrow Musiq, he regularly shares music-related content and updates with fans. With amapiano continuing to dominate both local and international music spaces, independent artists like Castrow Musiq are increasingly using digital platforms to showcase their talent and build recognition without waiting for major label backing. Castrow Musiq hopes his latest release will open more doors for collaborations, performances and industry recognition as he continues building his name in the competitive music industry.

CantTholakala uses collaboration to grow amapiano journey

Orange Farm producer - Meshack Mothelle Ramabele - stage name CantTholakala, is steadily building his name in the amapiano scene through collaborations and sounds rooted in township culture.

Born and raised in Drieziek, this growing producer combines soulful amapiano with Mbhoqo influences, creating music driven by emotional melodies and deep log drums. Inspired by artists such as Kelvin Momo, CantTholakala says his productions are shaped by personal experiences and kasi life. "I don't just make beats - I try to tell stories through sound. Every track must feel like where I come from, but also where I'm going," he said. The producer has worked with several artists including Cubid, Dji Stona, Ntr Gt, Dilastro, Siyastro, Ona Reloaded, Mellow, Jeff, Thando, Joro de Loco, and Sali NDB as he continues refining his sound and expanding his reach within the industry. For CantTholakala, collaboration plays a major role in artistic growth. "Music is not competition - it's connection. Every collaboration pushes me closer to my sound," he added. Driven by consistency and creativity, the producer continues to establish himself as part of a new wave of amapiano talent emerging from Orange Farm. He remains active on YouTube, Facebook, Instagram, and TikTok under the names CantTholakala and CantTholakala_18.

Bongani captures everyday life on canvas

At just 24 years old, visual artist, Bongani Senokwane, is using art to tell stories, capture everyday life and inspire young creatives in his community.

Senokwane discovered his passion for art through the Creative Mentorship Hub (CMH), where he joined in 2018 while still a shy teenager struggling with confidence. Through mentorship, life skills workshops and support programmes, he gradually found his voice and transformed his talent into a growing career. His collection features paintings and pencil sketches inspired by ordinary moments, including taxi scenes, city landscapes and portraits. The artworks reflect both emotion and daily life experiences, using different mediums such as paint on canvas and pencil on paper. He completed matric at Siyaphambili Secondary School in 2020, is currently enrolled at Artist Proof Studio to further his studies in printmaking. He also mentors younger artists at CMH, where he serves as a student teacher. Speaking to OFN Senokwane said: "Art became a safe space for me to express myself and understand my inner world. I want young people to know that where you come from does not limit your future." He said teaching aspiring artists has also helped him grow personally and professionally. "I enjoy guiding young creatives because I once needed that same encouragement. Seeing them improve gives me hope," he added. Creative Mentorship Hub praised Senokwane's dedication and perseverance, describing him as an example of how mentorship and opportunity can help unlock potential. With his confidence growing and his artistic journey gaining momentum, Senokwane hopes to one day establish himself as a recognised professional artist while continuing to uplift others through creativity.

Austin emerges as a fresh voice in Lakeside

Thato Makuzeni, professionally known as Austiin, is carving his name into South Africa's music scene with a blend of Afrobeat rhythms, hip hop lyricism and soulful storytelling.

Hailing from Lakeside Estate, the rapper and vocalist is gaining attention for music rooted in hope, resilience and authentic life experiences. His emotionally driven sound aims to connect deeply with listeners while giving a voice to everyday struggles and ambitions. Austiin's journey into music began in a faith-based home, where church choirs and Sunday school performances nurtured his love for singing. He started writing songs at the age of 18 and later developed a sound inspired by international artist Bryson Tiller. In 2024, he officially launched his professional career, collaborating with producers and artists including 2k Beatz_za, Yellow Verse and Skholoma. His growing catalogue includes the track Wachikiko alongside Gento Bareto. The artist has also performed at events such as Red Square and Yellow Verse, while earning features on Kasified Podcast and Thetha FM. Austiin told OFN: "My music is about healing, purpose and telling real stories people can relate to. I want listeners to feel seen, understood and inspired when they hear my songs." Currently working on an upcoming album and new collaborations, Austiin believes consistency and authenticity will continue to open doors in the industry. With his distinct fusion of Afrobeat and hip hop steadily attracting attention, the young artist is positioning himself as one of the Vaal's promising new voices in music.

Lesego transforms moments into visual stories

Orange Farm photographer and entrepreneur, Lesego Maphanga, is gaining recognition for his emotional storytelling and growing photography business at Eyethu Mall.

The self-taught creative was named one of the Sunday World Unsung Heroes 2023 in the Youth in Business and Entrepreneurship category, an achievement he says motivated him to work even harder. His love for photography began in childhood after watching his father use disposable cameras to capture memories. Although financial challenges prevented him from studying at the New York Film Academy, he continued teaching himself through practice, online tutorials and experience. Maphanga explained that photography became more than just a hobby. "Photography became part of who I am and a way for me to tell stories without speaking," Maphanga told OFN. Known for his low-key and storytelling-driven style, he focuses on capturing authentic emotions through lighting, shadows and natural expressions. Starting with a Canon 400D camera, Maphanga built his business from the ground up despite limited resources and misconceptions about photography. "People think photography is just taking pictures, but there's skill, patience and emotion behind every image," he said. Growing up in Orange Farm inspired him to value memories and human connection, while also motivating him to inspire young people in his community. "I want young people from Orange Farm to know their dreams are possible too," he added. Maphanga hopes to one day own a fully established professional studio and become one of the best photographers to come out of Orange Farm.

Mastro RSA turns childhood passion into growing music career

What started as a childhood interest in music for Mlungisi Samson Mbele, widely known as Mastro RSA, is gradually developing into a growing career within the Vaal music scene.

The Lakeside Proper-based artist, originally from Petrus Steyn, began pursuing music at the age of 11 after discovering a passion for creating and performing songs in 2016. His journey has included working alongside Lawkiid and forming professional relationships with producer and manager Negro ZA. "Music has been a journey of growth for me. Every year I'm improving, meeting new people, and learning how the industry really works. I'm focused on developing my sound and building something solid that represents where I come from," he said. Drawing inspiration from street culture and contemporary South African sounds, the artist is focused on creating music that connects with everyday experiences while developing a unique identity of his own. With consistency and collaboration driving his progress, Mastro RSA continues to establish himself as one of the developing talents emerging from the Vaal.

The Sentinentals keep musical legacy alive after 27 years

Images: Sentinentals

For 27 years, Orange Farm's a cappella group, The Sentinentals, has continued using music, harmony, and cultural storytelling to build a lasting legacy both locally and internationally.

Founded in 1999 by Zweli Dlomo, Sammy Mhlanga, Eric Mkhumbeni, Tebogo Modisane, and Lucky Nyakane, the group grew from a shared passion for music into a recognised act that has performed across South Africa and overseas.

The group has released two albums and is currently working on a third project as they continue expanding their musical journey. "Our journey has never been easy, but the love for music kept us together," said co-founder Zweli Dlomo. Their international journey began with performances in Germany in 2003 and Italy in 2004. Following the Italy tour, a documentary titled From Orange Farm to Italy aired on SABC 1 and later received a nomination at the Sithengi Film Festival. Over the years, The Sentinentals have shared stages with artists including Ladysmith Black Mambazo, Rebecca Malope, Kelly Khumalo and Mafikizolo. The group also counts performances for former president Nelson Mandela and former US president Bill Clinton among its proudest moments.

Participants from different walks of life came together in a show of support, unity and community pride during this event

The Modimo O Moholo School of Disability Centre successfully hosted its 5km Fun Walk on 13 May, drawing learners, parents, organisations and community members in a vibrant celebration of inclusion and unity.

Held under the powerful theme "Nothing About Us Without Us," the event created a platform for awareness, participation and shared joy among people of all abilities. The initiative was made possible through a partnership between Dipontsho Disability, Madonsela Foundation, and the Solly Mathe Foundation, all of whom contributed to the success and spirit of the day. Speaking to OFN, one of the organisers Pontsho Mthethwa reflected on the importance of community-driven inclusion. "This Fun Walk showed what happens when we come together. It is about more than walking - it is about recognition, respect and ensuring that people with disabilities are part of every conversation," said Mthethwa. Principal Hlengiwe Tshabalala of the Modimo O Moholo School of Disability Centre also expressed gratitude for the strong turnout and support from the community.

"We are truly humbled by the response. Our learners deserve opportunities like this where they are celebrated and embraced. Today proved that inclusion is alive when communities stand together," said Principal Tshabalala. The 5km route was filled with energy, colour, and encouragement as participants walked side by side, reinforcing the message that disability inclusion is a shared responsibility. Organisers described the event as a success, not only for promoting health and wellness, but for strengthening bonds and breaking down stigma around disability in the community.

OFLFA elects new leadership

The Orange Farm Local Football Association (OFLFA) has entered a fresh chapter following a successful Annual General Meeting (AGM) held at Ext 1 Hall on 24 May.

Football stakeholders, affiliated teams, delegates, and guests gathered for the meeting, which focused on the future of football development in Orange Farm and the election of a new executive committee. The AGM agenda included opening remarks, apologies, approval of previous congress minutes, annual and financial reports, IEC proceedings, and an address by the newly elected chairman.

In an official statement released after the AGM, the association thanked all stakeholders and attendees for their participation and support.

OLFA secretary, Patrick Mokwena told OFN: "The AGM was successfully held in the spirit of unity, development, and commitment towards the growth of football within our community." The newly elected executive committee will serve for the next four years under the association's "Vision 2030" programme, which focuses on developing young talent, community empowerment, education through sport, transparency, and sustainable growth.

The new leadership team includes Chairman Thomas Ngobeni, Deputies Siphon Mzoto and Nqobile Mtshali, Secretary Patrick Mokwena, and Treasurer Monica Mdluli. Additional members elected are Abel Malanda, Andries Ramala, and Abel Matsoro.

The association said it remains committed to strengthening local football structures and creating more opportunities for young players in the community.

With the new executive officially in place, local football supporters will now look to the leadership to help grow the sport and build a stronger future for football in Orange Farm.
